

FIRST PEOPLES HOUSE OF LEARNING

ENWAYAANG: THE WAY
WE SPEAK TOGETHER

Who we are:

Located on the Traditional Territories of the Anishinaabe and Algonquin Peoples, the First Peoples House of Learning is the home of Indigenous student services and Indigenous campus and community initiatives at Trent University.

In the spirit of “Enwayaang” which means “the way we speak together” in Anishnaabemowin. First Peoples House of Learning works closely with local First Nation communities through our Aboriginal Education Council and local community service agencies. We also work with all Trent University student supports, administrative and academic departments to support students’ personal and academic success.

Dr. Dawn Lavell-Harvard, Director FPHL

Help build a brighter future through education

Thank you for considering a gift to the funds below at www.trentu.ca/give

Contact Lorelei Wilkinson at lwilkinson@trentu.ca or 705 748 1011 x6025 for further information, including how to establish an endowment.

- Indigenous Mentoring Program

Funding of $1,000 will help provide an upper year Indigenous mentor for an incoming student for the academic year.

Mentors help support and guide Indigenous students as they enter university. The mentorship is also a paid employment opportunity for the senior student.

- Indigenous Student Support Fund

It is imperative for students to retain vital relationships with their culture, land, community, and family while attending Trent University. Your gift will support travel costs for Indigenous students returning to their home communities during their studies. Students confirm that frequent travel back to their remote communities for cultural ceremonies is especially important to continue their connection to home and culture.

My mother used to say: "What are you going to tell the creator when you leave this world and answer him what have you done for your community?"

Dr. Shirley Williams, Elder and Professor Emeritus

INDIGENOUS FACULTY

11

As more Indigenous students receive their PhD, they can help make systemic change,