

The Rotary Community Hub

Since 2010, our 40-member club has invested over $600,000 dollars into local organizations, community programs and civic improvement projects, and contributed $44,000 to national and international initiatives. We have too many volunteer hours to count, and that's in just the last seven years.

In 2017 we set our plans to develop the Rotary Community Hub. Our Legacy Project. The vision for this project was cast almost ten years ago – to build a Rotary landmark, to establish a social enterprise for revenue generation and an investment source for community capacity building.

We are renovating a 7,000-square foot, century-old building to be a connection place, with more than a dozen organizations and programs, meeting rooms and an outdoor green space for gatherings. A place to go to get help, or to give help.

The Hub will be designed as a welcoming community space, a safe place, a no wrong door for all people. A place where community collaboration will flourish.

Our Legacy Project is about life and living. It's about learning from the past, living in the present, and building for the future.

The Original Vision

1. Construct a Rotary landmark

- Brand awareness
- Meeting space

2. Establish a permanent fundraising source

 Earn revenue from leasing office space to a core group of NGOs, short term/ad hoc office rentals, and community meeting rooms

3. Support community capacity building

More services can be offered and existing services can expand

The Hub model was evolved from the Community Resource Centre established by Community Connection in 2002. At its peak, the Community Resource grew to 9,500 square feet shared by 20 organizations and programs, and comprised some back office shared services.

In February 2017, Community Connection moved half its operations into 199 Campbell Street to provide cash flow into the project. In July 2017 the Rotary Club of Collingwood moved its meetings into the location, and by 2018, there were 13 organizations and groups utilizing the shared space.
