

Sue Nelson

Sue Nelson, much older than she looks, was a career coach for 4,051 mid-life professionals, as well as a culture fixer for 35 organizations, all of whom are happy that she has now retired and moved on to serving in Rotary. She checks the boxes for District Grants, and asks annoying questions on RC of Cleveland's International Service and Membership committees and Board - all in between adventures with her grandchildren.

Over 30 years, Sue has been asked to figure out what would help organizations thrive, or at least stay out of trouble. She has coached companies of all sizes (from Ford Motor Company to Cleveland Museum of Art) to understand the power of our words and to communicate in the most effective, meaningful way before hurtful misunderstandings lead to lawsuits.
