Bart Qualsett

Pinnacle Bank to open new Loan Production Office

Pinnacle Bank is proud to announce the opening of a new Loan Production Office in Grand Island. The new office will allow Pinnacle Bank to meet consumer, mortgage, commercial and ag lending needs in Grand Island and the surrounding area while it builds its full-service bank facility. The Loan Production Office will be attached to The Pinnacle Agency building located at 3610 W. Capital Ave.

Pinnacle Bank has announced Bart Qualsett as Market President in Grand Island. Qualsett brings 31 years of banking experience in Omaha and Fremont, including 11 years as bank president. "Bart is a natural choice to lead our presence in Grand Island," Pinnacle Bank

President Marc Hock said. "His leadership and banking experience coupled with his strong Grand Island roots make him an excellent choice to manage this growing market."

Qualsett will return to his hometown to join Pinnacle Bank as they establish a presence in Grand Island. "Pinnacle Bank's culture of building trust, treating people right and caring for the community is a real differentiator. It is especially unique when combined with the bank's size and capabilities to meet the banking needs of all customers and businesses," Qualsett noted.

Qualsett has been very active in the Fremont and Omaha communities serving in the following organizations: Habitat for Humanity, Rotary, Fremont Public School Foundation, Greater Fremont Development Council, YMCA, Fremont Area Community Foundation, Fremont Housing Authority, his local church and as a youth sports coach. He is a graduate of the University of Nebraska-Lincoln and the Graduate School of Banking in Colorado.

Lambert appoints Minahan to City Council

PATTI JO PETERSON
 Managing editor

Sean Minahan took the Oath of Office for the Plattsmouth City Council Monday night minutes before assuming the Ward I council seat formerly held by Joe Dugan.

Mayor Paul Lambert began a search to replace Dugan, who resigned from the council last month due to unforeseen circumstances.

Minahan expressed an interest in serving on the council, after holding positions on the Plattsmouth Community Foundation, Plattsmouth Airport Authority and Cass County CASA. He is an attorney at Lamson, Dugan and Murray, LLP, where he has practiced general civil litigation for 16 years. He was made a partner in the firm in 2009.

“In those 16 years, I have represented both individuals and corporations in a variety of legal matters from the smallest personal injury claim to multi-million dollar commercial disputes,” he writes in the email.

He has also been a member of the Nebraska Agri-Business Club and was recently elected to serve on the Nebraska Board of Delegates for the Nebraska Bar Association. “I believe that my work in resolving disputes and issues for my clients will serve me well on the city council. I look forward to serving on the city council and representing the needs of our neighborhood and the city as a whole,” he writes.

His wife, Angie Minahan, is also active in the community as a member of the Plattsmouth Main Street Association and Rotary Club. She is an attorney at law at Reinsch, Slattery, Bear and Minahan law firm in Plattsmouth.

Sean and his wife moved to Plattsmouth over 10 years ago. “While Angie and I were not born or raised in Plattsmouth we consider it our home and fully intend to raise our family here,”

Sean states in an email he sent to the mayor.

Angie and Sean have two boys, seven-year-old Quinton and four-year-old Finnegan.

Lambert said he was very impressed when Sean came to him two years ago wanting to serve on any city government boards such as the Airport Authority or Civil Service Commission.

“I think he is going to be a great city council member. He brings a lot to the table,” Lambert said.

Following her husband’s swearing in ceremony at Plattsmouth City Council, Angie Minahan, holding son Finnegan, joins her husband and newly appointed council member Sean Minahan and their eldest son Quinton in front of the flag.
