Rotary club hears about music ambassadors

Tammy Partsch, musical accompanist at Lourdes Central Catholic School and staffer at Nebraska City Tourism and Commerce, treated the Rotary Club to a European tour of sorts at their Nov. 8 meeting, through the eyes of local high school student members of Nebraska Ambassadors of Music (NAOM).

Partsch said her son Luke, who plays several instruments, received a brochure in the mail two years ago from Voyageurs International Ltd., a travel agency that organizes tours, most often to Europe, for Ambassadors of Music chapters around the country. The seed of an idea was planted.

In June of this year, Partsch and seven Nebraska City high school musicians spent four days in Fremont, Neb., for orientation and rehearsals, joining 250 other Nebraska teenagers. The 16-day tour in four buses took the group to England, Switzerland, Germany, France, Italy, and Austria.

The Ambassadors performed four concerts. There were three ensembles: a string orchestra, a concert band, and a choir. Students could participate in just one ensemble, or in choir and one of the other groups.

The first stop was London, with a visit to Windsor Castle and a choral concert in Wesley Chapel, the church of John and Charles Wesley, founders of the Methodist Church. The choir sang the beautiful "Sicut cervus" by the Renaissance composer Palestrina, a four-part motet based on verses from Psalm 42.

Concertizing continued later that afternoon in Cassiobury Park northwest of London. Visits to the London Eye ferris wheel and "The Phantom of the Opera" topped off the day.

The next day found the group at the White Cliffs of Dover, then on to Paris for hot dogs in Montmartre, a lightning-quick two hours at the Louvre, and the Eiffel Tower.

Seeing the city's many refugees living in improvised camps made of blankets hung on cords was also a powerful experience for the Nebraska group.

The drive across France (which "looked a lot like Nebraska...so did Germany") brought the group to Chillon Castle near Montreux and Lake Geneva, Switzerland, followed by a concert at the Rococo-era Wilton Basilica in Innsbruck, where the choir sang a "spectacular" version of "Amazing Grace" as well as an outdoor concert surrounded by the Alps.

Rounding out the trip were a choral performance at St. Mark's Basilica in Venice, Italy, a visit to Dachau concentration camp in Germany ("Lunch was pretty quiet after that," said Partsch), and final performances of "Sicut cervus" and "Amazing Grace" in the Franciscan church in Gothenburg, Germany—"a fairy-tale city," where the band also performed in the town square, to a standing ovation.

Partsch encouraged those interested to learn more about the trip and see photos and video to seek out the Nebraska Ambassadors of Music Facebook page.
