AWESOME EFFORT TEAM AND GREAT TO SEE THE TAIL END OF HENSH - FOR THIS YEAR

AND THE LAST WEEK OF ZOOM REPORTING

In an era of necessary Covid social rigour, our Zoom meetings are refreshingly, delightfully casual. Sarita sets up the link; Liz coordinates the conversations, which by- and-large, are catch-as-catch-can. Members sign in as their time suits and so, tonight, eventually 16 members attended, 14 by video and 2 by 'phone.

There is a degree of meeting structure: early on, we discuss where Cashmere Club is at, relative to Covid level and so our club regarding meetings. Then Liz will ask what various members have been doing that highlight their week e.g. The Wales' dog, Poppy; Sarita's vegepod plantings; Anna's design chosen for the front cover of her school's review, ...

And a bit of business – (for what little business a Club has in the midst of a universal lockdown) - tonight, Hensh (traditional spelling), its success to date and planning for the week ahead; the new Yaldhurst site; site management aspects; income to hand; ...

Athol's 'Joke of the Week' was the question: what is the difference between ignorance and apathy? Ans. 'don't know and don't care'.

And Alan A's 'Closing Tale': On the Monday prior to the booked Wednesday delivery of Hensh, Alan spoke to the Hensh office lady for the first time, all previous conversations having been with Jonathan, the manager. She couldn't confirm the delivery booking for the Wednesday, and currently, Wednesday was fully booked. Alan accepted delivery for the day earlier, so Tuesday. The delivery arrived at Agricultural Park, 2 hours before "Jacinda" announced the lockdown. Alan acknowledged the stress he might have experienced had the lockdown extended into October, gardens being well established by then and without the same uptake by then, for 50 tonnes of chicken manure.

A hearty vote of thanks was accorded Alan for his leadership. of 'Hensh'. The work and commitment of all, was acknowledged.

Huge thanks to Mel Opie – Zoom meeting reporter
