Our Story

It is difficult to summarize a project that has included over one hundred partners over several years, but we will try. This project began when health providers from several tribes decided to develop group prenatal care programs to support pregnant moms in their communities. The Fargo Moorhead AM Rotary Club was eager to seek funds and the March of Dimes was able to provide training and support.

Last September, health leaders met in Sioux Falls to discuss the project further. They named themselves the Indigenous Prenatal Care Coalition (IPCC) and began holding regular monthly meetings to plan their group prenatal care programs. Meanwhile, many Rotary clubs and districts around the world chose to contribute funds. Sanford Health and the Departments of Health in Minnesota and North Dakota provided support as well.

Finally, in the spring of 2019, funding was committed to the project and five tribes/health organizations serving indigenous women had finalized their participation. FMAM Rotary Club submitted the completed application to Rotary International and they approved the project and matched the committed funds.

Today, we launch this two year project and will begin our training to develop group prenatal care. We hope hundreds of women will receive this new, enhanced prenatal care, and that it will improve the health of moms and babies in these communities.
