BRADLEY CURREY JR., Ret. CEO
RockTenn

“The Regional Water Issue Challenge”

For the past fifteen years, Brad Currey has been working on water planning for the Atlanta region and the State of Georgia and the 25 year water war between Georgia, Alabama and Florida. He currently serves on the boards of the Metropolitan North Georgia Water Planning District and ACF Stakeholders, Inc.

Before retiring from RockTenn Company (CEO 1988-2000), he and Worley Brown built the company from a $12 million manufacturer of paper boxes to a $1.3 billion manufacturer of recycled boxboard and packaging. It is now a $15 billion enterprise called WestRock Company. Currey came to Atlanta in 1953 to join Trust Company of Georgia.

He has served on several corporate boards including Trust Company of Georgia, Genuine Parts Company and Brown & Brown, Inc. He served as a trustee and chairman of the boards of The Lovett School, Emory University, Atlanta

He and his wife, Sally, have four children and ten grandchildren. A native of Chattanooga, Tennessee and a graduate of Princeton University, he was a U.S. Army Infantry soldier and Armor officer during the Korean War.

LEE THOMAS, Deputy Director
GA Dept. of Economic Development
Director, GA Film, Music & Digital Entertainment

“The Impact of the Film Industry in Georgia”

Lee Thomas is a Deputy Director at the Georgia Department of Economic Development and the Director of the Georgia Film, Music & Digital Entertainment office, the state agency that is responsible for promoting Georgia as an entertainment industry destination by increasing the awareness of Georgia's film, music and multimedia business opportunities, resources and infrastructure.

A native Atlantan, Lee began work at the Georgia Film and Videotape Office as a project manager in 1996, and then became a location specialist for the office in 1998. After finding locations for film and television projects for 12 years, Lee became director in 2011.
